REPORT SHOWS TEXTILES AGAIN STAND SECOND

The latest report of the Dominion bureau of statistics shows that the textile industry, which is of such vital importance to Hespeler, continues to occupy a leading position among all Canadian industries. This recent report, like the one issued last year, classifies textiles under more than a score of headings: the sum of the figures under these headings designates primary textiles as providing employment for the second largest group of wage earners in Canadian industry. The bureau's figures are for 1936, when one hundred and fifteen thousand employees were paid a total sum of ninety-five million dollars. The only industry standing ahead of textiles in numbers employed is wood and paper products.—Hespeler Herald.

LIGHTNING BOLT BLAMED

The jury, enquiring into the cause of the accident which resulted in the deaths of three men in the Michel mine, have returned the following verdict:

"Edward Morrison, W. H. Cartwright and John Phillips came to their deaths on July 5th, at approximately 1:30 p.m., in the mine known as B beam, room 11, west entry 4, owned by the Crown's Nest Pass Coal Company, Michel, B.C., they being killed by an explosion presumed to have been caused by an electrical flash from an electric storm, and probably the presence of a small percentage of carbon monoxide.

"After hearing the evidence of the chief electrician, we, the jury, recommend that expert advice be obtained as to the improvement in the grounding system at the mouth of the mine. "No blame is attached to anyone."

WATCHFUL SCOUTS TREAT ZOO BITES AND SCRATCHES

Consistently for the past two seasons, on all week-ends and holidays from May until September (quoting The Calgary Herald), a group of Boy Scouts have been performing a fine piece of community service, perhaps little realized by many visitors to St. George's Island, who may have noticed four or five neatly uniformed lads around the Old Log House at this popular park. But let lack of caution in placing hands or fingers within in reach of the zoo animals result in bites or scratches—and the toll is many throughout the summer—or let any accident occur on the grounds, or lost children need assistance in finding their parents, this squad of Scouts is at hand to render aid.

NEW PASTOR INDUCTED

A large audience attended the United church on Friday evening last, when the new pastor, Rev. E. B. Arrol, B.A., was duly installed as pastor.

Rev. John Wood, of Hillcrest, was in charge of the service, assisted by Rev. H. J. Bevan, of Coleman, and Rev. Richard Upton, of Bellevue.

The address to the congregation was delivered by Mr. Bevan; the address to the new minister by Mr. Upton, and the final charge by Mr. Wood.

Following the service, refreshments were served in the auditorium, where the congregation officially welcomed the new pastor.

HENRY FORD'S PHILOSOPHY

"Plant more acres and work the land right up to the fence rows. Get more products on the market. Cut prices. Get better machinery and cut production wastes. Forget all this bosh about machinery robbing men of their jobs. Good machinery creates jobs by the millions. Every new product that can find a market means employment. The duty of industry is to pay the highest wage to the producer, and sell the product for the lowest price to the consumer.

"If a dictatorship comes here it is because the people have been asleep on the job, and, therefore, deserve it. Of course, to have a dictator you must have two things: a man big enough to dictate, and the people dumb enough to be dictated to. We don't grow either of these in the United States.

HE SAID A MOUTHFUL

Premier William Aberhart Sunday spoke a truism when he remarked: "The whole question lies in the fact whether the people's love for money in bribes and bounties is greater than their love for economic freedom and liberty."

Premier Aberhart should be able to answer the question himself. Offer of a $25 per month bribe elected him and his party to power. The majority of electors who voted him into office were not concerned with the philosophy of economic freedom. Electors in Germany and other totalitarian states handed over their economic and political freedom to dictators on the assumption that they themselves would be given some form of bounty or bribe.

The average individual is not concerned with working for the betterment of his fellow man, but is very deeply concerned with getting something for himself. The few idealists who fight for such abstract things as economic freedom, political liberty and social security are usually the ones to take the count when the demagogues get to work with their lavish impulses of something for nothing.—Drumheller Plaindealer.

By a vote of Coleman miners last week, Drs. H. G. Claxton, of Medicine Hat, and C. Rose, of Simpson, Saskatchewan, were chosen to succeed Drs. Borden and MacLean, resigned. The engagement is for two years, with clause of sixty days' notice during contract for resignation or replacement.

A quiet wedding took place at Coleman on Saturday last, when Mary Susan, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bucken, of Coleman, became the bride of Mr. Gerald Douglas McWilliam, only son of Mrs. McWilliam and the late W. McWilliam, of Lundbreck. Following a wedding supper and reception at the home of the bride's mother, Mr. and Mrs. McWilliam left on a honeymoon trip to Nelson. Upon their return, they will take up residence on the ranch near Chapel Rock.

NEWS FROM EDMONTON

(By T. B. Windsor)

Edmonton, July 12.—Alberta still is waiting for some startling announcement of a new economic and financial system. Reports that the government is planning a new issue of scrip, only slightly different from that which failed so miserably and expensively two years ago, grew stronger last week, and at the same time some action still was being awaited on establishment of credit unions under the act passed a few months ago.

There has been no sign yet of real progress toward the unions, but it has become obvious to observers here, and to national experts on credit unions, if not to the Alberta government itself, that such unions cannot possibly take the place of banks. Thus, when political appliers say that it does not matter if banks withdraw from Alberta because credit unions will replace them, those politicians are misleading the people.

The world's outstanding founder, expert and publisher on credit unions is Roy F. Bergerson, and his latest book, Cuna Emerges, has just gone into its third edition. Mr. Bergerson states flatly that credit unions do not and cannot replace banks, and that on the contrary they do all their business with banks. They cause no loss of business whatsoever to banks, he says, because the unions deal only in their savings and small loans which otherwise would not be made at all.

During the past week Premier Aberhart, for the first time since he assumed office as the head of the Social Credit government, met his match in a public meeting at Okotoks when his outspoken critics howled him down and forced him to stop speaking. The premier is the most unpopular public speaker in a rough and tumble debate in Canada. He habitually avoids debating in the legislature, because he knows he is unable to hold his end up in any sort of give and take discussion.

In all his career he has been used to dictating his views on everything without contradiction, and to be howled down must have been a humiliating experience to one so heavily loaded with self-opinion as he. The premier has begun now to discover that a public meeting with its angry hecklers and indignant critics is a very different sort of gathering to a political meeting with its carefully chosen and placid audience. His statements can never be questioned.

Comment in Edmonton, both inside Social Credit circles and among opponents, agreed that the visit of Premier Aberhart to his own riding can now be classed along with his ill-advised Saskatchewan adventure as another blunder of a man over-rated as a leader, and another demonstration of Premier Aberhart's lack of foresight, judgment and tactfulness.

The premier on his return to Edmonton made a characteristic comment, declaring that he had no tact. He declared his critics at Okotoks were a bunch of "rowdies." He must have had up his mind that he had no expectation of votes at the next election from these people, or he surely would have had more sense than to insult respectable citizens just because they disagreed with his policies.

It is being rumored in Edmonton now that one result of the premier's tour of his constituency will likely be the $200 held illegally by the government from the petitioners who wanted to unseat Mr. Aberhart will be returned. Even a blind man could now understand and perceive that the withholding of this money damaged the premier's standing with the electors more than anything else.

Another result of the tour will be the election of E. C. Manning and Premier Aberhart, as leaders in governmental propaganda activities in Calgary, must cause spreading the false statement that 90 per cent of the people are behind the government. Nothing like 90 per cent are supporting Premier Aberhart in his own constituency. He was not a candidate there in the election, his seat in the legislature coming to him as a gift through the resignation in his favor of the elected candidate, and it is safe to bet he will not be a candidate there when the election comes next time.

He will not face the music of an election campaign there. As chief elector the Social Credit candidates for the legislature, Mr. Premier will see to it a safe and easy riding will be his.

According to the Eureka (Montana) Mirror, the Oddfellows at their international picnic, held there on June 26th, consumed fifty gallons of lemonade, fifty gallons of ice cream and fifty gallons of coffee.

At the United church manse at Bellevue, on Sunday last, the marriage took place of Miss Florence, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. North, of Blairmore, to Mr. Roland A. Warn, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Warn, of Bellevue. Rev. R. Upton officiating. Attendees were Miss Hilda Warn and Mr. Richard North. Following a honeymoon trip to Spokane, Mr. and Mrs. Warn will take up residence in Bellevue.

FISH AND GAME ASSOCIATION MEETS

A general meeting of the newly formed Blairmore Fish and Game Association was held at The Enterprise office last night, with a fair attendance.

The minutes of June 5th were read and adopted.

The suggestion that prizes, monthly and yearly, be offered was acted upon favorably, and it was decided that the first outing of the association be held on the first Sunday in August, with location and other matters therewith to be dealt with by the executive. A canvass will be made for prizes for July month.

Prizes will be awarded for the best rainbow, best grayling and bull trout; also for best basket of fish at the August 7th outing. All prize fish to be weighed in cleaned.

Members of the party will leave Blairmore at 6 a.m. on August 7th, to start fishing at 9 a.m. Baskets and fish to be weighed and judged at 4 p.m. Members will take lunch and own refreshments.

Upon resolution, it was decided to affiliate with the provincial association, also to register the club at Edmonton.

SUCCESSFUL VIOLIN PUPILS

The following local district pupils of Mr. W. H. Moser were successful in passing their examinations in violin, with Mr. Maurice D'Oisly, of the Royal Schools of Music, and Mr. Etienne Mazziolen, of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, as examiners:

Potatoes ensured this summer's camp for the Boy Scouts of High River. On a town lot provided by the town council, each boy planted a bucketful of seed potatoes, and advance orders contracted for the entire yield.

Drs. Borden and MacLean will be leaving Coleman today, the former for Penitence, where he will take over a medical practice; and the latter for Boston, Massachusetts, where he will take a postgraduate course. Dr. and Mrs. Borden and Dr. and Mrs. MacLean have been highly tested and fared well during the past week, and their departure from Coleman is keenly regretted.

PASSES AWAY

After a short and not too happy life, another micrograph sheet, purporting to be a daily paper, died a natural death at Sioux Lookout last week, when "The Newswire" appeared for its last.

Referring to its demise, The Northern Observer, Sioux Lookout's weekly newspaper—the printed sheet—states: We have not done so, and will not spitefully chronicle the failure of any enterprise, be it needed, worthwhile or otherwise, but we still feel that Sioux Lookout and district was being served by this newspaper quite satisfactorily prior to any daily type-written sheet entering the field, and this fact still remains.

The Northern Observer ranks favorably with the weekly papers of the Dominion as a well printed, well edited, eight-page weekly newspaper, in which it is logically expected the advertisements of the various business houses should appear as a printed word to the subscribers. When Sioux Lookout requires a daily newspaper, The Northern Observer will print it.

Young Tunney Lust registered a fifth-round knockout against Sailor Goodland last week end. Goodland was down for the count of nine in the fourth round.

HON. R. J. MANION IS NEW LEADER OF CONSERVATIVES

Ottawa.—With a new leader, a revised policy, a new organization and name, the National Conservative Party of Canada moved on to another stage in its history which coincides in time and event with the history of the Dominion since confederation. The new leader is Hon. Robert James Manion, who brings to the office of opposition, chief in Canadian politics experience gained in a varied career in medicine, war, politics and literature.

"I am your leader; I am not your commander," Dr. Manion told delegates, gathered from every federal constituency, just after his selection from a field of five.

He pledged himself and his abilities unreservedly to the service of the party and the nation and invited co-operation and suggestions of all.

The election culminated a three-day convention in which the party organization was revamped, the name changed from "Liberal-Conservative" to "National Conservative" and a series of resolutions embodying party policy adopted.

Only two ballots were required to give Dr. Manion a majority over the other four candidates, Munk MacPherson, of Regina; Joseph Harris, of Toronto; and Hon. J. Earl Lawson, of Ontario.

His chief opposition came from Mr. MacPherson who entered the race at the last minute and on the first ballot rolled up a total of 475 votes to Dr. Manion's 726.

On the second ballot the low man, Mr. Lawson, with 105 votes, dropped out and the two leaders who increased their strength at the expense of the other two.

Dr. Manion's total rose to 830, more than half the total and ample to elect him. Mr. MacPherson's rose to 645 and Mr. Harris and Mr. Lawson, who polled 131 and 128 respectively on the first ballot, were tied with 48 each on the second.

These votes were divided approximately as follows: Yukon, seven; British Columbia, 70; Alberta, 60; Saskatchewan, more than 70; Manitoba, 115; Ontario, more than 600; Quebec, more than 400; New Brunswick, more than 70; Nova Scotia, more than 70; Prince Edward Island, 35.

Dr. Manion won the leadership by a greater margin than did Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett at the 1927 Winnipeg convention, although the total vote was practically the same. On the first ballot at Winnipeg Mr. Bennett had 594 votes against 345 for Hon. Hugh Guthrie, his closest rival.

On the second he polled 780 and won. One other difference was that at Winnipeg all five leaders were lost votes while here Dr. Manion and Mr. MacPherson shared in the votes changed on the second count and both increased their strength.

With the co-operation of all the party followers Dr. Manion predicted a victory for the party at the next general election which, he warned, "may sneak up on us like a thief in the night."

The Mackenzie King government, he declared, was "on the skids." It was "a do-nothing government." Prime Minister Mackenzie King could not do anything to save his administration. It was headed for defeat just as surely as Conservatives were in 1935.

Dr. Manion himself was a victim of that defeat for he lost his seat for Fort William to a Liberal candidate. However, he was assured of a chance to re-enter the house when Mrs. George Black, one of the two women in the House of Commons, announced she would resign her seat for the Yukon in his favor and ask Prime Minister King to give the new leader an acclamation.

Gold Taken Off Liner

Rimouski, Que.—Removed by tug from the damaged liner Anania, stranded near the spot where she struck bottom recently, $1,500,000 in gold was taken aboard at Father Point and loaded on a train for Quebec, where it was re-shipped to London.

Elevator Destroyed

Lethbridge, Alta. Fire destroyed the Alberta Electric Company elevator at Woodhouse, 25 miles northwest of here. Between 800 and 900 bushels of wheat burned. Cause of the fire and total damage have not been determined.

Tourist Income

Halifax.—Gross income from Canada's tourist industry last year was $300,000,000, Resources Minister T. A. Crerar said on his arrival here.

Outbreak in Shanghai

Exploding Bombs And Assassins' Bullets Cause Turmoil

Shanghai.—Exploding bombs and assassins' bullets ushered in the first anniversary of China's armed resistance to Japanese invaders and threw the International Settlement into turmoil.

Three bombs were thrown simultaneously at a Japanese entry post on Garden Bridge, a floating restaurant off the Bund—now used as Japanese gendarme headquarters—and the Yokohama Specie Bank branch, also on the Bund.

One Chinese was killed and another wounded. Police reserves and foreign defense units were called out to guard against more serious outbreaks of terrorism in China's commercial capital.

An "ordon" quickly was thrown around the foreign area, blocking all traffic between the International Settlement and Japanese-occupied territory.

An unidentified Japanese riding a bicycle in the International sector guarded by United States marines was shot and killed. His assassin escaped.

In Japanese-occupied West Hongkew, a part of Shanghai, Japanese sentry was shot and killed by three Chinese who threw a hand grenade at a Japanese sentry post on the Yuyehing road bridge, linking the settlement with Hongkew.

Three bombs were tossed against a Japanese cotton mill on the settlement outskirts, and a few moments later three more bombs exploded in the mill's living quarters. One British Sikh soldier from India was wounded.

Japanese reported new gains over Chinese armies defending the Yangtze river approach to Hankow, China's provisional capital and goal of Japan's campaign.

Horse Epidemic

Deadly Brain Disease Plays Haves in Manitoba And Saskatchewan Winnipeg.—Widespread rains in western Canada have temporarily checked the encephalomyelitis epidemic, deadly brain disease killing Manitoba and Saskatchewan horses. The Manitoba department of agriculture reported.

Dr. Alfred Savage, animal pathologist, said the rains would settle dust, a main carrier of the disease. He said he had reached almost every section of the two prairie provinces.

Dr. Savage could give no estimate of the number of animals dead. "There are possibly 100 dead in Manitoba," he said, "but Saskatchewan's total is far greater."

Harshest hit area in Manitoba is the Russell district, 200 miles northwest of Winnipeg, near the Saskatchewan border. More than 300 cases have been reported in that district.

Municipalities in the southwest are comparatively free from the epidemic because of wide use of preventative vaccine in early spring.

Summerfall operations in south-eastern Saskatchewan have been retarded and in the Heward district, 90 miles southeast of Regina, 15 horses have been stricken fatally and 25 more afflicted.

Riots in Jerusalem

Eighteen Arabs And Three Jews Slain In Gun Battle Jerusalem.—A bomb explosion in the business centre of Haifa followed by a running gun battle between Jews and Arabs killed at least 21 persons and wounded 60 others.

The outbreak was one of the bloodiest in the long history of Arab-Jewish clashes in the holy land and which each group considers its national and spiritual homeland.

Race rioting broke out during the evening rush hour when crowds were hurrying home. Witnesses said that after the bomb exploded police constables opened fire on the rioting crowds, causing a majority of the casualties.

One of the victims was Tuvia Doumle, 55, well known contractor and brother-in-law of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the British Zionist Federation. Official figures said 18 Arabs and three Jews were killed.

Origin of the bomb was not determined immediately. Another bomb tossed from a moving train into a Jewish crowd at Tel Aviv killed a woman and wounded two men.

Flood Takes Many Lives

Tokyo.—A disastrous flood surged through Kobe, principal port of western Japan, and reliable estimates placed the number of dead at about 460 persons. A Kobe resident telephoned to Tokyo that destruction was heavy. He said the final death toll might reach 1,000.

Must Import Grain

Britain Will Have To Depend On Empire For War Time Provisioning

London.—The government is determined to aid domestic agriculture to the fullest extent, but war-time provisioning of the United Kingdom must ultimately depend upon supremacy of the royal navy, Prime Minister Chamberlain told a parliamentary delegation.

The group called upon Mr. Chamberlain at the House of Commons to seek an explanation of a disputed passage of his speech at Kettering, in which he warned any attempt by Great Britain to grow all the food it needed would ruin these "empire and foreign countries who are dependent on our markets."

The prime minister prefaced his remarks with an expression of gratitude for the opportunity of clarifying certain errors of interpretation he claimed had been made by critics of his speech.

He insisted whatever the efforts to increase home production, the nation could not "reasonably" count on British self-sufficiency in foodstuffs.

YEAR OF WAR HAS BROUGHT CHINA SERIOUS DEFEATS

Hankow, China.—Twelve months of war have brought China disastrous defeats, staggering losses, bitter disappointments and the prospect of even greater distress in the year to come.

The year has cost China 500,000 of her best troops, parts of 10 provinces, most of her coastline with its ports through which flowed revenue-producing goods. It has cost her control of two-thirds of her railroad mileage and her greatest channel of commerce, the Yangtze river—but it has not brought China to her knees.

China derives hope from Japan's failure to obtain a local settlement after the initial clash outside Peiping last July 7. Hope also springs from Japan's failure after breaking the Chinese army at Shanghai and driving the government from its capital at Nanjing, to obtain a dictated peace. Finally, there are Japan's repeated failures to break China's united front.

The Chinese Nationalist party, Kuomintang, is working as a unit under the leadership of General Kai-Shek.

After a decade of efforts to discredit Chiang and his government, the Chinese Communists, if not actually fighting side by side with the general's nationalists, are using their acknowledged abilities as political agitators and guerrilla fighters to prevent Japanese consolidation of gains in Shanai province.

So far China has dipped only sparingly into the currency reserves she built up before the war. Another year, however, may force her into these reserves, unless loans and credits are obtained abroad.

Munitions From Canada

Britain Is Considering Placing Order For Explosives Here

London.—Sir Thomas Inskip, minister for defence co-ordination, announced in the House of Commons that the government is considering an order for explosives in Canada.

"As regards the production of aircraft," Sir Thomas said, replying to Sir Henry Page Croft, Conservative, "the government have under examination the report of the recent special mission sent to the United States and Canada, who made an inquiry into this matter."

"As regards the manufacture of other munitions, orders have been placed in Canada for shell bodies and Bren machine guns, the former direct with the Canadian manufacturers, the latter in association with the Canadian government. An order for explosives also is under consideration."

Frederick Bellenger, Labor: "Are the types of munitions for which orders have been placed in Canada similar to the type to be supplied the Turkish government under the bill before the house?"

The minister did not reply.

Hansard Report

Ottawa.—The House of Commons Hansard for the recent session, which opened Jan. 27 and closed July 1, runs about 5,600 pages and the senate Hansard 700 pages, it was disclosed. Followers of parliamentary discussion estimated each page averaged 800 words, bringing the commons report to 4,000,000 words and the senate to more than 500,000.

Was Widely Known

Winnipeg.—P. Graham Padwick, 50, known and respected by thousands of western Canada school pupils and adults for his development of orchestral playing among children, died last week. He was director of school orchestras for the Winnipeg school board.

BRITAIN PROVIDES UNIFORMS FOR VOLUNTEER WORKERS

Would Leave Austria

4,500,000 Ready To Escape Nazi Rule If New Homes Can Be Found
Brian Le-Hais, France.—An Austrian refugee leader told United States delegates he believed 4,500,000 Austrians would flee Nazi rule if a 32-nation conference could find them a new homeland.

Arthur Rosenberg, representing the Federation of Austrian Exiles at the meeting inspired by President Roosevelt of the United States to try to help German Jews and refugees, asked about 75 per cent of Austrians would leave their country if allowed to take a substantial part of their property with them.

(The Austrian population in the 1934 census was 6,760,233. Various estimates put the number of Jews in Austria at the time of the Austro-German union at 200,000 to 300,000, and the total number of persons with some Jewish blood at 600,000—roughly 10 per cent of the population.)

The United States delegation, headed by Mr. C. C. Taylor, former head of the United States Steel Corporation, took the lead in preliminary negotiations for settling the refugee problem—made acute by the Austro-German union March 13.

MAKES A RULING AGAINST PADLOCK DISALLOWANCE

Ottawa.—Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe is not prepared to recommend that the governor-general disallow Quebec's padlock act, nor is he disposed to recommend a reference on the constitutionality of the legislation to the supreme court of Canada. This decision was contained in a ministerial report rendered to the governor-in-council by Mr. Lapointe.

While the validity of the act is a proper subject for determination by the courts, Mr. Lapointe's opinion is that action should be based upon a concrete case "rather than upon the submission to the supreme court of Canada of an abstract question."

The padlock law, officially described as "an act to protect the province against Communistic propaganda," was passed at the 1937 session of the Quebec legislature. It provided that buildings where Communist literature or propaganda was found could be padlocked by authorities.

First action under the law was taken last November when the office of the weekly Montreal newspaper "Clarion" was raided and padlocked. Later the Montreal office of the Toronto daily newspaper "The Clarion" was raided and 700 copies of the paper, along with other publications and documents, seized. Several book stores and print shops also have been raided.

The minister's opinion, rendered one day before the expiry of the statutory one-year period within which the government may exercise its right of disallowance, is a lengthy document. The 15 sections of the act are cited, and their purport explained.

Mr. Lapointe then dealt with a petition received last January from the Canadian Civil Liberties Union, Montreal branch, which asked that the statute be disallowed.

"Numerous other protests and representations against this measure were also received by the government from various organizations and individuals throughout Canada, but located or residing for the most part outside of the province of Quebec," the minister said.

Copy of the petition was sent to Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec with the invitation he submit whatever representations he might desire on the subject.

"Subsequently," the minister reported, "the petitioners having expressed a desire that counsel should be heard on their behalf in support of their application, the undersigned (Mr. Lapointe) made an appointment for the hearing of argument, in exception to the ordinary procedure in consideration of an application for disallowance."

Premier Duplessis advised the provincial government would not be represented at the hearing. The petitioners were heard through Warwick Chipman and Charlemagne Rodier, acting as counsel for the Canadian Civil Liberties Union. Present also were Hubert Beaupre, president of the Montreal branch of the organization, Professor Frank R. Scott and J. K. Mergler, Montreal.

PLAN TO TRAIN ROYAL AIR FORCE PILOTS IN CANADA

London.—Sir Kingsley Wood, secretary of state for air, told the House of Commons arrangements were being made for an officer to be sent immediately to Canada to explore the possibilities of working out a scheme for the training of Royal Air Force pilots in the Dominion.

Sir Kingsley said this statement in replying to Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition, who asked if the air secretary's attention had been drawn to a statement by Prime Minister Mackenzie King that the Dominion government is prepared to afford facilities for R.A.F. training in connection with its own establishments.

The minister said: "Yes, an offer to this effect has been communicated to His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom by the Canadian prime minister through the United Kingdom high commission."

"A reply has been sent—an expression of warm appreciation of the offer," Sir Kingsley added, "and arrangements are in the making in accordance with the suggestion of the Canadian prime minister for an officer to be sent immediately to Canada to explore, in co-operation, the possibility of working out such a scheme of training facilities in Canada."

Throughout the press Prime Minister King's statement overtook foreign news. The Times gives an editorial note, it drawing the conclusion that not only will it be "appreciated in this country," but that "it shows the readiness of the Canadian government to co-operate in assuring the safety of the whole Commonwealth of British Nations."

Two aspects of the statement please British experts, who are competent to assess its correct value. When the Canadian government voluntarily offers to assist Canadian citizens and train them to fight in the British air force in advance of an outbreak of war it is believed there can be no doubt of where Canadian stands. This statement, regarded as a perfect answer to all those who doubted whether Canada would back up Britain when trouble comes. Secondly, the British air ministry is now confident that Canadian flyers, who are greatly increased, are forthcoming in numbers approximately Britain's need for them. The requirements are admitted to be large.

Whether Canadian recruits are trained by the Canadian or the British air force is regarded as a minor technicality. The Canadian air force is completely integrated with the mother air force here. Every senior Canadian air officer has been trained here and the Canadian force always has been a branch of the British air force, capable of fusion by a stroke of the pen.

It is presumed the British government will pay the cost of training, but whether a lump sum will be paid for each recruit or whether cost of equipment and instructional officers, plus the pay of recruits, will be paid is not known. Also it is believed that Ottawa has in mind a maximum figure for recruits otherwise Canada would soon have a major air force. Great Britain is seeking upwards of 50,000 air force recruits this year, and nothing could please the air ministry more than if the Canadian government is prepared to duplicate this effort.

The feeling here, pending negotiation over details, is that Britain has got everything she could possibly desire from Canada.

Estate In Okanagan Valley Presented To Fairbridge Farm

Schools London.—Fairbridge Farm Schools announced Captain J. C. DunWaters had presented his Fintry estate in the Okanagan valley of British Columbia to the schools.

The older Fairbridge farm school will be moved to the new site on the west side of Okanagan lake near Vernon and occupy 2,500 acres. It was acquired by Captain DunWaters when he came to Canada in 1919 and he has used it for the raising of Ayrshires.

The farm is self-contained, being made up of range land, orchards, greenhouses, a dairy, and deer and traplines. It has its own water development. Captain DunWaters is popularly known as the "Laird of Fintry." He was formerly a Scottish publisher.

Blairmore, Alta., Fri., July 15, 1938

NOTE AND COMMENT

How time flies. Two years ago this month (Sunday evening, July 12th, to be exact), Premier Aberhart announced from the Strand theatre, Edmonton, that the government expected within six weeks to commence paying the basic dividend of $25 per month. This thrilling announcement was followed by several weeks of "covenant" signing. Three or four hundred thousand of these historic documents were signed by Albertans during those hectic few weeks. Every city, town, village, hamlet, over the length and breadth of Alberta vied with each other to see if they could attain that 100 per cent "sign-up" asked for by our premier. According to the returns some over enthusiastic centres even exceeded the 100 per cent, and most of the others reached it or were well above 90 per cent. Then came weeks of breathless anticipation. We were told that there was a tremendous amount of work entailed in assembling all the information contained in these momentous documents. More weeks and months went by and less and less was heard about the matter. Now, we never hear anything at all about "covenants" and still less about our basic dividend of $25. Is it not strange how excited we Albertans can get about something and then in less than two short years forget all about what it was that stirred us up? We wonder what has become of the three or four hundred thousand "covenants"? It would be interesting to know if they were placed in an ark, archive or arsenal, or whether by this time they have met the ignominious fate that befell the infamous "Bankers' Toodles" pamphlet at the hands of Joe Unwin, and have been consumed in the "fiery furnace." We think it would be a nice gesture on the part of our premier before he takes his holidays at the coast to tell his children what has become of all their pretty little "covenants." Here's betting a Prosperity Certificate against a Three Hills Credit Union Certificate that our premier will be too shy to tell. Any takers?—Trochu Tribune.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright (nee Edna Cross, formerly of Blairmore) and two children, arrived here last week end on a visit to friends, and are house guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Shafer and family. They motored to Waterton Park on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, of Regina, who were on a holiday motor trip as far as Blairmore, called on various local oldtimers, including the Olivers at the Crystal Dairy and ourselves, and returned east on Saturday to Waterton, thence back home. Mrs. Arnold and Mrs. Wilson were formerly Katie and Annie Banemer, of Lundbreck and Blairmore, the former for a time being "hello" girl here.

Rev. Mr. Maude, Baptist minister at Peace River, admits that he was a completely disillusioned Social Creditor. At first he had thought Mr. Aberhart had a good scheme, and had worked hard to the extent of getting 6000 registrations signed up. But now he realizes that it was only a Utopian dream that has become a racket. There are thousands like him only waiting the opportunity to regulate the whole farce at the next election. The voice of the ballot is the most honest voice.

ANSWERS NIT

It must have been a very interesting Social Credit meeting that was addressed by our premier at Okotoks last week, and as narrated in The Calgary Herald and Lethbridge Herald as authentic news matter.

Most of the questions advanced by his constituents received "nit" for an answer. They included:

"You don't believe in free speech—you put through a press act to try to keep the newspapers from printing the truth about your government?"

"Why are you trying to get rid of the Mounted Police?"

"How are we going to kick you out, when you won't get out?"

"What about the recall act? We tried to get you out that way, but the act was repealed."

"Sit down and shut up!"

"Is there going to be an election in the near future?"

"How much Alberta money was expended during the Saskatchewan election campaign?"

"Who paid your salary as premier while you were campaigning in Saskatchewan?"

"Why didn't you mind your own business and keep away from Saskatchewan?"

"Would Alberta farm women who raised turkeys be required to pay under the seven per cent production tax when turkeys were marketed?"

"Do you believe in the principle of reduction of interest on mortgages and other debts? Then is it true that the Calgary Prophetic Bible Institute loaned money by way of mortgages at 8 per cent interest?"

"Come on, answer that question." "How much script did Mr. Aberhart take while the plan was in effect?"

"I want to know why the provincial government paid Mr. Powell $4,000 before he left for England? There's been a lot of talk about the people's debt burden, so I want to know why it was further increased by paying this bonus to Powell?"

"Was Mr. Powell called upon to pay provincial income tax on the $4,000? We're going to find out whether he did or not."

"Do you want to put in your own storm troops to replace our Mounted Police?"

"Come on, answer that?"

"Are you in favor of the services of the Mounted Police being dispensed with?"

"Why wasn't the $200 deposit for the recall petition returned?"

Quite a number of local parties availed themselves of the beautiful weather and opportunity to see the prairie crops by journeying out to Waterton Park on Wednesday afternoon.

A woman entered the local bank on Saturday to make a deposit. She had some bills and checks to deposit, so she procured a deposit slip which required the listing of bills, specie and checks. She listed her bills and checks in their respective places, but was in doubt what to list under "specie." After a few moments thought she wrote after the word specie, "Female," and handed in her deposit.

Powder Snow In The Rockies

Nothing in Europe, according to the most enthusiastic visitors, can compare with the Canadian Rockies for sking. Record crowds of visiting winter sportsmen this season have found superlative snow conditions in the Banff and Lake Louise districts of the great mountain ranges in Western Canada. Owing to the altitude of this mile-high playground, the sking will remain good until early summer.

The Canadian Rockies are experiencing a great increase in popularity. Special trains have brought large crowds of skiers regularly from Western Canada and United States to enjoy the fine powder snow surface on the long, sweeping slopes of Mount Norquay and Sunshine Lodge, and many parties have penetrated to the unsurpassed Skoki Valley and Mount Asinibolne districts. Other large parties have come from Toronto, Boston, New York and distant eastern centres.

Among their numbers have been celebrated skiers acquainted with the most famous ski-grounds of the world, all of whom have been impressed by the scenic grandeur, sense of exploration, and the perfect snow conditions.

The pictures above include two scenes from Mount Asinibolne and Skoki Valley and action shots of expert skiers enjoying the deep powder snow.

38,541 persons attended the opening day of the Calgary exhibition and stamped.

Mr. and Mrs. Finlay McLaren left Saturday to spend a few weeks' holiday at the Pacific coast.

Ernie Kronpitz, who has a lovely crop of assorted radishes, has decided to operate a jam factory at the rear of The Enterprise office.

In twenty years from now some of our leading "business men" will have gone to the "happy hunting grounds," and The Enterprise, which goes on forever, will not be able to quote their ads in the "Eighteen Years Ago" column. Enterprises are found in homes many years old, but hand sheeters never. "Too bad...too bad!"

Richard Large, of the staff of the Blairmore Pharmacy, left on Sunday last for Victoria, where he enters upon a special course of study in qualifying as a pharmacist. He has already met Alberta requirements through the Alberta University with high honors. He will be away for at least three months. Mrs. Large and young son Barry accompanied him.

A quiet wedding was solemnized in the United church here on Saturday, when Miss Alma Phyllis, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Badot, became the bride of Mr. Edward Beaudon, of Hillcrest, Rev. E. B. Arndt officiating. Following a wedding breakfast, the young couple left for Calgary, and upon their return will take up residence in Hillcrest.

The New York Herald-Tribune in a news story says an expenditure of $1,000,000,000 (one billion) by the British government in Canada for a huge supply and training base for Britain's Royal Air Force is probable. The undertaking would embrace not only a manufacturing plant for planes and aerodromes, but also a training field, to be in constant use for development of pilots to man R.A.F. planes, which would be based permanently in Canada.

During the big Old Home Week being celebrated July 18-23 at Fredericton, New Brunswick, members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, of the Maritimes will converge on that city for a fraternal celebration. Copies of maps and descriptive literature have been sent broadcast to all Elk lodges throughout Canada, in the hope that some might be of service to any member contemplating being in the east and in a position to attend the functions, which start on Monday and continue through the entire week. A special feature on Wednesday will be a boat excursion to Grand Lake, plus a clam bake.

Bragging may not bring happiness, but no man with a large fish goes home through the alleys.

The new Greyhound bus terminal at Macleod is expected to be in readiness for opening this week end.

The third of the three Alberta acts referred to the Privy Council, the Bank Tax Act, has been thrown out the same window as ultra vires. Pretty soon a new waste basket will be needed.

Those in charge of chucking out Alberta government legislation could probably find the task easier if they were to use the ordinary chuck wagon. "Would serve also as a waste basket."

John MacDonald, a fifty-year-old Alberta school teacher, was beaten almost to death by two newly-made friends in a Toronto suburb on Wednesday evening, and is in a critical condition in hospital. He had been visiting a brother whom he had not seen for twenty years.

An interesting visitor to Blairmore and The Pass yesterday was Mr. Harry H. Lewis, maintenance councillor of The Tremco Manufacturing Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, and Toronto, Ontario, whose present office is in Calgary. Mr. Lewis was accompanied on his motor trip by Mrs. Lewis. He was an old-time acquaintance of Capt. W. A. Beebe, and in his rush through here enquired of him.

The Pincher Creek Echo remarks: It did not take the Privy Council long to throw out the Alberta Press Gag law. Not being lawyers, The Echo is not able to discuss the technical grounds of the judgment, but when it comes to the liberty of the subject, the highest court in the Empire is not apt to waste much time on that subject. We think the Alberta government was very ill-advised to have spent the taxpayers' money on a quest of that kind, when that money could have been spent to make work for thousands of people who are looking for a job.

A man down in Vancouver was sentenced to two years in jail for having a bad $3 bill. A couple of years ago quite a number of people in Alberta had money that was bad on one side, but never went to jail for it.

The Winnipeg Free Press pictures Alberta's Great Redeemer trying to sell to the poor people of Saskatchewan his mystic cure for all their ills, including in-grown toenails, housemaid's knee, constipation, bellyaches, headaches, dizziness, depression, laziness, debt, dandruff, currency problems, pain in the neck and that sunk feeling. $25 a month in each bottle—popularly branded "Monetary Moonshine."

The surgeon's wife picked up the book her husband had laid down. "John," she said, "why have you ripped out the back part?" "Have I?" he replied. "It's the appendix, of course. I suppose I removed it without thinking."

Mr. Meffan was endeavoring one evening to cut up an orange in such a fashion as to represent a pig. After strutting the table with about a dozen peels, he gave up the futile experiment, saying, "Phooey with the pig! I can't make him at all!" "Nonsense, honey!" said the wife, pointing to the table. "You have done splendidly! Instead of a pig, you have made a litter!"

Turner Valley Wells Will Save For West $5,500,000 in 1935

Evidence submitted on behalf of the Government of Alberta at a recent hearing of the Tariff Board in connection with developments in the Turner Valley oil field is that as a result of these developments, petroleum consumers in the prairie provinces this year will pay approximately $5,500,000 less for gasoline, distillates and other light petroleum products than they paid in 1933. This is solely because the Turner Valley was brought in as an important oil producing field. This estimate is based upon 1937 consumption and if the west should be blessed with a good crop which would result in a larger consumption of petroleum products, the saving would be proportionately greater.

Co-operation among producers, pipe lines, railways and refiners to extend the market for Turner Valley crude by making its products available throughout the prairies is responsible for this great saving to consumers. (10)

New Insulin Treatment

Old Indian Herb Remedy Reported By B.C. Physicians

Discovery of a new possible source of insulin, arising from experiments by two British Columbia physicians with an old Indian herb remedy, was reported in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

The new extract, it developed, will eliminate hypodermic injections, said an article by Doctors R. G. Large and H. N. Brocklebank, both of Prince Rupert, B.C., discussing their research work on the roots of the Devil's Club, "a shrub that grows wild in great abundance along the coast of British Columbia."

Made by boiling bark from the plant roots, the extract has given "remarkable" results in reducing the sugar in the blood of a test group of diabetic rabbits, the article said. The extract, unlike insulin which necessitates hypodermic injections, is taken through the mouth.

"Our attention was brought to this material," the article continues, "through the examination by one of us of a surgical patient who, on hospitalization, developed marked symptoms of diabetes."

"This person, it was learned, had kept in apparent good health for several years by oral doses of an infusion of this bark root, and is in fact still leading a normal life with the aid of this infusion."

"Such a preparation has long been used by Pacific coast Indians, though for what specific purpose is not clear," the article concluded.

Complete Long Motor Trip

Three Englishmen Followed New Route From India To England

Three young Englishmen arrived in London from Delhi, India, after a 6,500-mile drive in an automobile that cost them $70 and took them over a route never before attempted in a car.

The men, Captain C. V. Griffin of the Royal Engineers, Lieut. G. W. M. Kenrick of the South Staffordshire, and O'Brien Thompson, an engineer, spent two months on the road, repaired one broken axle and three broken springs and stayed with natives in mud huts and tents.

Once they thought they were stopped by a seasonal river 150 feet wide and four feet deep. But coolies helped them dismantle the car and carry it across to the opposite bank where they re-assembled it.

Not That Kind

In Scotland children habitually refer to a slice of bread and jam as a "piece," and workmen talk of taking a "piece" for their dinner-hour. This vernacular use of the word led to some confusion at the Empire Exhibition the other day. A pacifist visitor inquired of a girl attendant the way to the Peace Pavilion and was diverted on being asked "Is it sandwiches you'll be wanting?"

Connecticut first raised tobacco between 1640 and 1660.

Makes Faces For Living

Puppets and Marionettes in Clay in One Woman's Business

Miss Meta E. Hannay of Boston loves to make faces. She has made 37 so far and could, she says, go on making them forever.

The faces are not mere contortions of the features, however, but masks for marionettes. Puppet faces undergo six processes before completion. These include modelling from clay, baking and painting by hand. At least not two are alike, each set is interchangeable. For example, the same face will serve for Cassius, Ichabod Crane or Peter Quince.

Simplicity and space-saving are paramount virtues in puppeteering, Miss Hannay thinks.

She is able to construct a light, workable stage in a few minutes. She saves old sheets and dyes them in pastel colors for curtains, paints her own backdrops on cardboard and can evolve lighting equipment from a string of Christmas tree bulbs.

She is even iconoclastic enough to dispense with the wooden "control" to which the marionette's strings are usually attached.

Miss Hannay also makes "flat puppets," which are worked by the fingers. She has a complete Punch and Judy show of this sort, with capes and hoods made from old socks collected from neighbors.

NEW HIGH OR LOW-BACK SLIP

By Anne Adams

Definitely—this is a slip that's in a class by itself. The Pattern (No. 4842) will make you want to get your scissors out immediately—for it's so simple—and the illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions are so easy to follow. See how well shaped the front and back panels are and how the bodice and shoulders are cut in one piece so that the straps won't show down. It's a style to give your favorite, for it has a "smooth ending" influence on the figure, and won't twist or bind. Make several slips in durable silks or synthetics, if you want your Summer and early Fall frocks to fit superbly, without a wrinkle underneath to spoil their perfection.

Pattern 4842 is available in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 2 1/2 yards 39-inch fabric. Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly Size, Name, Address and Style Number and send order to the Anne Adams Pattern Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 170 McDermot Ave. E., Winnipeg.

To Protect Newspapers

Distribution Company in London Prepared For Air Raids

Editor & Publisher, New York, says they now have an A.R.P. office in London—Air Raid Protection, we gather from a piece in the Newspaper World—which is mightily concerned with the welfare of journalism in the event of a hostile air attack. The Government has emphasized that "in an emergency the continued distribution of newspapers would be a vital factor in maintaining public morale."

To date, newspapers have not taken any specific precautions, but one of the largest newspaper distribution companies of the city has an elaborate program. Truck drivers and their assistants taking papers to railheads must wear clothing which will give reasonable protection against gas. Cheap wrapping paper will be used on bundles, to be discarded if contaminated by gas. Ten per cent. of the plant staff of 3,000 people will be highly trained in anti-gas fire, and first-aid work. Field telephones have been acquired against a breakdown in the normal public service. Storm and bicycle lanterns have been provided should public lighting fail.

Alternative space has been arranged for every department so that the landing of a bomb will not disrupt the organization, and bedrooms and canteen service will be ready to accommodate workers held in the building by a prolonged raid. The basement of the Central London building, several acres in extent, is being completely gasproofed as a shelter for the entire staff. And similar arrangements are being completed in all the firm's branch offices throughout England.

It is suggested also that newspapers' private wire systems be used as an auxiliary if a raid should damage the Post Office wires. The latter are being protected in many technical ways against destruction by bombs, with specially constructed buildings, duplicated services, and routing diagrams for connections around a damaged area.

To Encourage Business

Should Lighten The Burden Of Taxation To Stimulate Trade

In its revision of the income tax law, Ottawa has offered employers who establish pension plans for their employees a credit on their income tax for the lump sum payment that is usually necessary to provide for older employees.

This is all to the good, but Ottawa might well have gone a great deal further.

It should lighten the tax burden on industry generally and thus pave the way for a profitable prosperity that would be a basic incentive to establishment of such plans.

There are few better ways of helping people to help themselves than to encourage group insurance and pension plans. Such plans make employer and employee partners.

They give security, a stake in the community, and, above all, a sense of standing on one's own feet.

This is a great deal better than relief, old age pensions and the rest of it.—Toronto Financial Post.

Australia's Marriage Rate Has Not Changed In 30 Years

Statistics reveal that Australians are the most stable marrying people in the world.

Neither the World War, the modern pace of living nor economic crises have changed their ideas on the subject, and their marriage rate is the same as in 1908.

The latest figures show 8.4 marriages per 1,000 of population. The only countries with a higher marriage rate now are Russia, South Africa, Germany, Denmark and Rumania. Italy is lower.

Explanations and Comments

Israel Oppressed by Sisera, Captain of Jabin, King of Canaan, Judges 4:1-5. Joshua's conquest of Canaan was incomplete, and many clans remained in the possession of the original inhabitants. There was no federation of the tribes against their common enemies within and round about. It was a rude, rough age, "Israel's Iron Age." As Dr. Marcus Dods aptly terms it. Several times a powerful enemy threatened to annihilate the Israelites, but each time, as the Judges who saved them out of their records say, "Jehovah raised up from them that despised them."

A great crisis then came. Jabin, King of the northern confederacy of the Canaanites, through Sisera, his commander-in-chief, had held for 20 years a military despotism over the northern district of Canaan. Nine thousand chariots of iron had he. There was danger that his power might grow till he regained the whole land and sealed Israel's doom.

"Deborah's Challenge to Barak, Judges 4:4-7." Here was a weak and struggling people, whose future was in the hands of a woman, and of immense consequence to the whole history of religion, charged with a heavy spiritual destiny, and in danger of just ceasing to be anything at all before they had even begun to be what they were meant to be. The spirits were broken; those chariots drove across their very soul. If ever their lives came together, they said: "It's no use, Sisera is too strong for us; we have only foot soldiers, poorly armed. If we rise against him, Sisera, he would only ride us down the more fiercely." And then, when the women at all, a woman turned the tide of history" (Gaius Glenn Atkins).

The woman was Deborah, a prophetess and the judge of Israel at that time. She was accustomed to sit under a palm tree (therefore known as the palm tree of Deborah) to declare what was the judgment of God in national affairs, and to settle disputes among her people.

With faith in God's directing hand as empowered Joan of Arc for her part, Deborah summoned Barak and ordered him to raise a force of ten thousand men from the tribes of Issachar and Zebulun and to attack Sisera with his chariots and his multitudes at the River Kishon. Only two tribes were called because they were the most interested in defeating the oppressors, for their territories lay in the Plain of Esdraelon. "And I will deliver him unto thy hand"—Deborah is speaking in the name of Jehovah.

A Geographical Term

In Reality a Name Named Budapest

Does Not Exist
The name "Budapest" is an abstraction; it is purely a geographical and administrative term, meaning the Hungarian capital. In reality it does not exist. There is only the right side of the Danube River called Buda, and the left called Pest, and the difference between the two banks is about 700 years. Buda is 900 years old; Pest at most is 200. A lovely old bridge spans the river, and the man who built it was an English engineer, Adam Clark. His name is comparatively unknown in his country of origin; but in Buda there is a beautiful Old-World square called after him. Pest is pronounced "Pesth."

Playing For Time

Every Day War Is Postponed Makes It Less Likely

As President Benes of Czechoslovakia says, time works for peace. Every day of postponement must bring more careful calculations of chances, every day of preparation shows the picture of war in a more terrible light, and every new help to the horrors of current wars helps to consolidate at least the opinion of the democratic nations against the aggressors. War may still come: if it is avoided, the world will owe thanks to the statesman, who, in the face of bitter attack, secured it time to think.—Toronto Telegram.

Always Gets It Back

Conductor Has Lent Thousands Of Dollars To Passengers

History has it that a party named Diogenes once conducted an exhaustive but vain search for some honest folk. It seems a pity that Diogenes did this so long ago because there's a conductor around Chicago who could have put the lantern-bearing ancient on the right track by pointing out passengers on a railroad train.

The modern conductor is John L. Reece, who in his 45 years of service with the New York Central System has lent thousands of dollars to financially embarrassed train riders—and has never lost a cent of his investment in faith in human nature.

During the Century of Progress Exposition, for example, Reece produced the means of 17 persons to get back home. Various events brought these 17 to their predicament, such as a lost purse, a picked pocket or perhaps too grand a time for the extent of their resources.

"They'd come up to me at the gate in the La Salle Street Station," said Reece, who is a conductor on the Twentieth Century Limited "and ask me how they could get home. I'd tell 'em to get on the train—and I'd advance the fare. They all returned the money to me, with nice letters of appreciation."

On one occasion Reece lent $300 to a woman who was on her way to California from New York. She'd exhausted her funds and didn't have cash enough for breakfast. Reece took care of that, scribbled around among his friends in the station and gathered $300 for his passenger.

"She wanted to give me a couple of diamond rings for security," Reece relates. "But I didn't want to be bothered. A few days after I had the money back with an extra $50—and when I visited California a big car was at my disposal."

Runaway youngsters, old ladies carried past their station or on the wrong train—like the one who became confused at Elkhart and took the Century thinking she was getting on the "old road" local train which stood alongside—Reece has dug into his pockets hundreds of times to care for them. And never had reason to regret it.

U.S. Military Aircraft

Claim Made That It Is Superior To Best Of The World

The United States army, placing a $14,438,196 order for 88 fighting planes, took occasion to claim that the United States is superior to the rest of the world in designing military aircraft.

The planes ordered included 15 flying fortresses such as flew in February to Buenos Aires and return, 78 smaller bombers and seven stream-lined attack planes.

The planes are the first to be purchased out of the $45,000,000 congress gave the Air corps to buy 478 aircraft in the new fiscal year. About 700 new craft already were on order.

The army has some 1,400 first line planes in service now and expects to reach its goal of 2,520 of the most modern types two years hence, officials said.

"No," said Tilly, putting on a refined air, "my boy friend who works at the poultry shop down the road is going to do it."

Jack: "Almost everything, I guess, except sleeping sickness."

WHAT HO!

She scanned the gilt-and-mirrored room. There was a profusion of Americans, a rich variety of Americans there, but not the one American she sought.

Lady Rosa took a table on the balcony commanding a view of the room, ordered a glass of sherry, a turbot bonne femme, and a salad, and kept watch. At a table below her a man emerged from the shadow of a wine card as big as a baby's blanket; and then she did see a familiar face, her father's. Opposite him was Mrs. Clara Martha Phelps, looking twice as patrician as the earl, and nearly as happy. Lady Rosa resisted the temptation to drop a lump of ice on her sire's pate. If they saw her they'd ask her to join them and she did not feel that she was good company just then.

A smacking sound made her turn. Behind her in the corner, alone at a table for four, a man was smacking his lips over a glass of Burgundy, and making ready to perform a major operation on a steak the size of a dictionary. The diner was rather steady himself, with a medium rare complexion, porthouse jowls, and a hamburger neck. On seeing Rosa he got up and rolled toward her, an avalanche of beef. Stopping at her table he said:

"Lady Rosa Bingley?"

"Yes."

"Punder's my name."

"Oh, yes, Mr. Punder. I remember you, of course."

"Where'd that Yank?" Punder shot at her.

"I presume you mean Mr. Ernest Bingley."

"That's just who I mean."

"I don't know," Rosa said.

"Hah! You don't, hey? Done a bunk, has he?"

"He has left Bingley Castle, if that's what you mean, Mr. Punder; and I believe he is somewhere in London. I don't know where. I wish I did."

"So do I," said Punder. "If I lay my hands on that dirty, little beggar—"

"Mr. Bingley is neither dirty, little, nor a beggar," said Rosa, warmly.

"Hah! Ain't he?" said Punder.

"Quite the contrary."

"That's what you think, said Punder."

"It is."

"Well, you're wrong. He's a fake. He's an impostor. He's a nobody without a penny to his name," declared Punder.

"I'm afraid, Mr. Punder, your steak has gone straight to your head," said Rosa.

"Hah, has it?" said Punder. "Well, one of my men just phoned me from Paris. He had a talk with O. G. Wyncoop. Seems Wyncoop is hoping mad because he's clasped an undesirable alien on account of what his kid did here. Not—" threw in Mr. Punder parenthetically "that old Wyncoop isn't a robber himself."

"I fall to see how this applies to Mr. Ernest Bingley."

"Oh, you'll see," said Punder. "The net of it is that Bingley is no more a millionaire than that fish on your plate. He's just a country bumpkin that stuffs pet canaries for a living in a village in Iowa, or Ohio, or Ohioohoo or some such place. But he's a sly cove, and he sold up his shop to come over here and try out some of his cute games on us slow Brits. Well, he took me in. To the tune of twenty thousand pounds—"

"Are you accusing Mr. Bingley of stealing?" asked Rosa, pale as the table-cloth.

"No," Not exactly," said Punder. "He broke no law, or I'd set Scotland Yard on him. It was a legitimate enough business deal, no shadier than many another. He caught me napping. Fooled Pete Tyler, too. Pete didn't lose anything, but I did. I don't mind the twenty thousand quid, of course; but I hate being stung. I got pride. And when I catch up with young Bunco Bingley he'll feel the weight of my beetle-squashers."

Mr. Punder brandished a size 12A shoe.

"Are you sure, Mr. Punder," said Rosa, quietly, "that Mr. Bingley has no money?"

"Of course he has," said Punder. "Didn't I just tell you he short-changed me out of twenty-thousand? I don't quite see why he made me hand over those notes instead of cash. Of course, by now, he's had them discounted, and has probably lit out for Paris."

"That's what you think," said Lady Rosa.

"Huh?"

"He did not explain."

"Mr. Punder," she said, "have you no idea at all where he might be?"

Punder began to wheeze with gutty laughter.

"What did the rascal do to you?" he asked.

"That's my affair, I think."

More laughter shook the portly Punder.

"Sorry, but I don't see the joke," said Rosa.

"Ho ho ho!" chuckled Punder. "That little knave doesn't miss a trick. Takes 'em all, high and low, in his stride. Well, as we're in the same boat, let's join forces."

"No, thank you."

"Well, well, I'll hunt and you hunt. But if I find him first—"

"You'll grind his bones to make your bread, I suppose."

"Ho ho ho!" roared Punder. "That I will. If you get on his track, just ring 'em up at my Park Lane house, will you?"

"Yes, if you'll notify me the minute you find him."

"It's a bargain."

"I'm staying with the Countess of Bathurst in Grosvenor Square," Rosa told him. "And now, Mr. Punder, hadn't you better get back to your steak?"

"I expect so," said Punder. "Do you like hash?"

"Yes, why?"

"That's what I'm going to make out of E. Bingley," said Punder, and returned to his steak.

Lady Rosa was sipping her coffee when she heard a voice call out.

"Yoo hoo, Rosa, you hoo!"

Her father, on his way out of the restaurant, had spied her.

She waved her napkin at him.

"Till come up," yelled the earl, to the surprise of the sedate diners.

Come up to the balcony he did, and Clara-Martha Phelps came with him.

"Rosa," he said, "meet your mother."

Mrs. Phelps giggled.

"I mean to say," went on the earl, "she's going to be in a few months."

"Bless you, my children," smiled Rosa.

"We're to be married in Vienna," said the earl, "just as soon as Clara-Martha finishes her psychoanalysis. Then ho! for a honeymoon in Venice and back to Bingley Castle in Venice to water the tulip bulbs."

"I congratulate you both."

Mrs. Phelps placed a kiss on Rosa's ear.

"I've always wanted a daughter," she said.

"I say," said the earl, "any trace of old Ernest?"

"I haven't found him," Lady Rosa said, "but I've found him out."

"Ed! Riddle!" said the earl. "Tell me the answer quickly. We're late for the pants."

"Tell you later. Run along now."

"Come, ducky," said the earl, giving his arm to Mrs. Phelps.

"Yes, George-porgie," said Clara-Martha Phelps.

When they had gone, Rosa summoned her waiter.

"Please tell Max that Lady Rosa Bingley would like to see him for a moment," she said.

"Very good, m'lad."

Max presently approached her table. He had the air and profile of an emperor entering Rome in a triumphal chariot. Max spoke nine languages and knew enough about the British nobility, it was said, to make a fortune by blackmail, if he were so inclined. He wasn't. He preferred to be the major done at New's. Besides, he had a fortune.

"Good evening, my lady," he said. "May I offer you my felicitations?"

"On what, Max?"

Once you sweeten your morning cereal with BEE HIVE Syrup you'll know how good cereal can taste.

TRY IT TOMORROW

"On the successful culmination of his lordship's romance."

"Max, you know everything," laughed Rosa.

"I regret I do not know where you can find Mr. Ernest Bingley," Max said.

"How do you know I want to find him?"

"A little bird—"

"Meaning my father?"

"Yes."

"Max, let me pose a question."

"Please do, my lady."

"Suppose you were in London—"

"I am."

"And broke—"

"I have been."

"What would you do? Where would you go?"

"Meaning me, or a hypothetical character?"

"Meaning a young American."

Max gave thought to the matter, as if he were Tiberius considering a matter of state.

"He is without funds," he queried.

"Practically. Nothing but a return ticket to the States, I think."

"What I did," said Max, "when I first came to London as a young man, and a very poor young man, was to sit on a bench on the Thames Embankment and plan how to become a rich one. On the benches there, my lady, one finds many who were rich, and some who are going to be."

"I'll try there," said Rosa, getting up.

"Surely not alone?"

"Yes."

"It is a vile night."

"No matter. Thank you, Max."

"Always at your service, my lady."

Rosa paid her bill and stepped out into the fog.

No Insects Allowed

Trans-Atlantic Airlines To Have Sprinkling System For Pests

Bugs will not be permitted to hitch-hike on the trans-Atlantic airlines, the United States Commerce Department said. A report from the American commercial attaché at London said that Imperial Airways has developed an insecticide sprinkling system designed to rid aircraft of all insects pests. Imperial Airways and Pan American Airways are to inaugurate joint service between Great Britain and the United States this fall.

Ourselves Of Yesterday

During an intermission at a party, some prominent business men were discussing an absent member. Few could find anything pleasant to say about the person in question. One guest, who had worked his way to success up the ladder of many mistakes and failures, said, "That reminds me of about 20 words I once memorized from Dr. Isaac Goldberg's 'Tin Pan Alley': 'Snobbery is but a point in time. Let us have patience with our inferiors, they are ourselves of yesterday.'"

Must Choose Your Own

No Standard Diet For Arthritis According To Specialist

When a well known doctor, one moreover who specializes on the subject, says that "red" meat won't hurt you if you are rheumatically inclined, that's news. Dr. Douglas Taylor's pronouncement to that effect, made just before setting out to attend a convention in Halifax at which rheumatism was expertly discussed, should set the heather on fire with a vengeance.

For we have always been taught, generation after generation of us, that meat was bad for rheumatic subjects, and red meat something worse than merely bad. Every one that way inclined, from the first creaky twinges to the stage of gnarled and burning joints, has been told by the family physician or the specialist, expert to cut from his diet certain things, chief among them red meats of every kind.

And now along comes Dr. Taylor and blows that venerable belief sky-high. There is, it appears, no such thing as a standard diet for arthritis. You work out your own salvation by fitting your diet into your own brand of rheumatism.—Montreal Star.

Must Be Acquired

Good Taste Grows From Effort To Appreciate The Best

C. E. M. Jond, in Scribner's, states good taste is not instinctive, but acquired. All native tastes are bad. The taste of the young in music is abominable, in literature execrable. Good taste grows slowly through the effort to understand what is beyond us, the endeavor to appreciate what we cannot yet understand. It depends on our willingness to be bored with the good in order that we may become bored with what is bad and no demand something better. In short, it is born of faith, the faith that the kingdom of beauty can neither be purchased by dollars nor taken by force, but must be approached by a process of trial and error, a willingness to learn, and the humility which is prepared to accept on faith and the judgment of others what it cannot yet dare to reject on its own.

Provided New Words

Several Things Have Been Named After English Peers

According to So You're Going Magazine those amiable Englishmen who write to the newspapers have discovered a new one this year. Namely, what English peers have had their names turned into new words in the language? One begins, of course, with the Earl of Sandwich, who wouldn't leave the gaming table, ordered some meat between bread slices brought in, and achieved an unexpected fame thereby.

But there are apparently quite a lot of others, including the seventh Earl of Cardigan, who got a sweater named after him, the Duke of Wellington, who ended up as a pair of boots and a cooking apple, and a certain Crimean war general named Raglan, who turned out to be an overcoat.

The Streamlined Potato

Will Have No Deep Eyes And Be Easier To Peel

The work of the professional plant breeder is not designed to aid the farmer alone. "Streamlining" of cars has been followed by ideas of the streamlined potato. Such a variety is one of the chief goals of potato specialists everywhere.

This streamlining is the elimination of deep eyes that cause such waste during peeling. Buds being more economical, the newer shallow-eyed varieties may be peeled with greater speed.

Like the streamlining of cars, the elimination of deep eyes in potatoes is a gradual process. Our latest varieties are improvements, but still shallower eyes may be expected in later models.—Scientific American.

Underground Post Office

South Australian Opal Field Has Only One In World

Cooper Pedy, the remote South Australian opal field, possesses the only underground post office in the world. The prospectors live in "rooms" dug into the soft earth of the low sandstone hills. Here, too, is their bank and their post office. Cooper Pedy is the aboriginal name for white man's burrow.

Mechanized Viewpoint

Modern transport, press and film are creating in England what Earl Baldwin describes as a "standardized suburban mechanized mind". We already have too much of that here, states the Farmer's Advocate. Rural people accept all too placidly the urban viewpoint, and wholesome rural independence is becoming inarticulate.

Might Reverse Decision

Apply Case To Himself

A recent legal decision in the United States has fallen upon jailed sports writers like manna from heaven. It appears that the umpire at a ball game in a West Virginia town called a strike. The batter felt differently about it, made a verbal protest and followed it up with a punch on the nose. The umpire took the case to court.

After hearing the testimony, the judge dismissed the case with the remark, "It is the inalienable right of a baseball player to get mad and have a fight with the umpire."

The judge has had his little day; but we are wondering what his reaction would be if some litigant in his court exercised his inalienable right to get mad at a defendant and took a punch at the judge himself. Perhaps it might occur to the umpire's league to make a test case.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Could Tell Youth Of To-day That Life Is Never Easy

Our young people to-day, if they possess anything of the spirit of their pioneering forefathers, will not feel too sorry for themselves in that they may think to be their plight, says the Ottawa Journal. Their lot may seem hard, but it is not as hard as was the lot of their fathers, most of whom never knew the education nor the care nor the comforts which go to so many young people to-day. Let them remember that life, at best, isn't easy; that it is an endless adventure, a hard and long battle with unavoidable reverses. To ask the place without the dust is to ask too much.

A psychologist says it is no wonder school children write "bones," since words in English have so many definitions; for example, game has 15 meanings, grain has 30 fall has 26 and account has 34.

Jerry says: "If Aberhart would give us our names back, he could keep his covenants."

Making friends is easy, but we'd like to know how to keep them and still run a newspaper.

Born, on Monday morning, July 11th, to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jallie (nee Frances Peressini), a daughter.

Why should Aberhart and Manning go away down to the Pacific coast for a holiday, when Saskatchewan is so much nearer?

At a big annual picnic near High River last week, they had lickers that were not intoxicating—the Rebekahs. They licked the Oddfellows in a soft-ball game.

Hon. W. J. Asselting, minister of mines in the B.C. government, accompanied by J. F. Walker, deputy minister, visited Cranbrook, Kimberley and Fernie the early part of the week.

Mrs. Rose Peck, of Lethbridge, received injury to her head when her car collided with a government truck near Moyle last week. Her son and cousin escaped injury. Mrs. Peck was able to continue her trip to Spokane the next day.

Dr. C. Rose, of Simpson, Saskatchewan, has arrived at Coleman to take up medical practice. Dr. Claxton, who also was voted upon favorably as one of the physicians to succeed Mrs. Borden and MacLean, will arrive in Coleman on Sunday. He is an Alberta University classmate of Dr. T. Keith MacLean.

Addressing an audience at High River last week, Premier Aberhart stated it was the third time he had visited the constituency since his election—three years ago. And he was pleased to find a splendid audience of men and women who "think things through." He didn't mention about the people of Saskatchewan who were wiser and really saw through things.

The following tenders were considered for the new Creston high school building: Poole Construction Co., Edmonton, $54,470; Bennett & White, Vernon, $56,280; A. E. Jones, Cranbrook, $58,350; J. S. D'Appolonia, Coleman, $58,375; Ryan Construction Co., Vancouver, $59,237, and A. H. Green, Nelson, $59,890. The Poole Construction Co. were awarded the contract.

The "Neon Products" maintenance outfit were in The Pass the early part of the week. Wonder how often they came around to look over the big sign that occupied a place on the south side of Victoria Street for several years, costing in the neighborhood of from $700 to $850, and recently destroyed? It carried a clock that never operated more than 36 hours, but cost considerable money.

"Gone With the Wind"

Are you a "Gone with the wind" advertiser?

Does your advertising get as far as the front porch, only to be caught by a gust of wind and gone to clutter up your yard or your neighbor's.

This "Gone with the Wind" advertising falls in its purpose to get into the home, to be interesting enough to be read, to be convincing enough to sell the merchandise you offer.

"Gone with the Wind" advertising fails to serve you properly, and costs you too much.

In modern merchandising, time is money, and rapid turnover is good business. "Into the Home" Newspaper Advertising fulfills its purpose, works quickly, costs less because it sells more.
